Invasives

„I liked the Invasives. They did the screaming and rolling on the floor just right, and the bass player has great eyebrows.”-- Adriaan de Groot

STORY

THE EPIC STORY OF INVASIVES

The three men of Invasives were all but born into a life of music. Drummer Hans Anus spent much of his childhood being babysat by his father's bandmates, until scurvy forced them all into an early retirement. Hans has recounted that „touring privateer vessels is both exciting and arduous”. Brothers Adam and Byron Slack, who have known each other since Adam's birth, honed their musical skills recording homemade lo-fi demos on a boombox, all before hitting the ripe old age of ten.

Years later, as their lives converged, Hans and Adam met on a peewee football league (both of whom inadvertently inspired the movie „The Waterboy”).
